In this first episode of our special coronavirus disease (Covid-19) pandemic podcast series, Farmer's Weekly editor, Denene Erasmus, gives an update on how the publication has adapted to keep readers up to date with news and information relevant to the sector, and the public at large, during this critical period.

Despite not being able to print the magazine during April, Farmer's Weekly has increased the volume of new content being published on the website, and the team is working hard to keep our audience up to date and informed.

This episode also takes a look at the R20-billion per annum domestic citrus industry, which is just gearing up for the 2020 harvest season. Sabrina Dean speaks to CEO of the Southern African Citrus Growers' Association, Justin Chadwick.
